

What is the Difference?

BETWEEN FRENCH AND AMERICAN OAK

Each oak species offers different nuances – American oak contains more lactones than French oak, while French oak has more tannins than American oak.

Both species have similar potential for the creation of vanillin and the caramelization of wood sugars. American oak is known for being slightly creamier, whereas French oak is known for being slightly spicier.

